

Collection Summary

ID Number: CS 619

Title: We'Moon Land

Extent: 1 Folder(s)

Span Dates: 2006

Language: English

Geographic Locations: Estacada, Oregon

Abstract: This collection consists of a book and some general information about the women's community.

Historical Notes: In 1973, a group of women from Portland, Oregon, founded an eco-feminist women's community called the Farm; later, it became known as Who Farm, and then We'Moon Healing Ground, or We'Moon Land. It is located on 52 acres of land near Estacada, Oregon. The community is probably best known for its popular publications, including the We'Moon calendars and datebooks issued annually. Residents pay dues to live at the land, sharing work and contributing to other expenses in a mixed common/private economy. Women also visit for short-term stays. The community has averaged about six to eight resident members. Recently, We'Moon started a branch community, We'Moon South, in Sunny Valley, Oregon. Sources: Miller, Timothy. The encyclopedic guide to American intentional communities. 2nd ed.
