Historical Notes: The Shiloh Youth Revival Centers built a network of more than 175 communal houses from 1968 through 1989, the centerpiece being "The Land", 90 acres of forest near Eugene, Oregon, that became home to more than 100 young Christians. The movement experience a major contraction in 1979, and after a period in which the land was in limbo, it was sold in 1989. The property became the Lost Valley Educational Center, an intentional community that operates workshops and other programs on permaculture and other environmental projects, including an ecovillage project called Meadowsong. In 2005, Lost Valley reported 18 adult members and 6 children. Sources: Miller, Timothy. The encyclopedic guide to American intentional communities. 2nd ed. Clinton, New York: Richard W.
