

Collection Summary

ID Number: CS 098

Title: Chinook Learning Community

Extent: 1 Folder(s)

Span Dates: 1981-1997

Language: English

Geographic Location: Whidbey Island, Washington

Abstract: This collection consists of program guides from the organization.

Historical Notes: The story of Whidbey Institute began in 1966 when founders Fritz and Vivienne Hull purchased a late nineteenth century Finnish farm on south Whidbey Island. In 1972, the homestead and surrounding land became the Chinook Learning Community. Over the next 24 years, the Learning Community operated as a retreat center where gatherings and workshops convened individuals who hungered for community, a place for reflection, a connection to nature in a place that felt like home. In 1993, the early Community founders, together with new collaborators, gathered on the Scottish island of Iona to envision a new organization. Its goal was to cultivate and nurture forms deep personal development and community "on behalf of Earth and the Human Future." Two years later, the Chinook Learning Community merged with this new organization, which was named the Whidbey Institute. While the emphasis was new, the guiding principles and core values adhered to the organization's founding vision. In this way, the Whidbey Institute has been a direct outgrowth of the long and significant history of the Chinook Learning Community. In 1997, the Whidbey Institute obtained its 501(c)(3) status as a non-profit educational organization. Today, the Institute continues to serve the Cascadia bioregion through its commitment to cutting edge programs that contribute to a sustainable and life affirming future. While the Institute brings together people to engage with the most serious issues of our time, there has always been a foundation of optimism, a spirit of joy, and a confidence in our collective work to build a more vibrant, just and peaceful world. We thrive on a home of 100 acres of forest and meadows – still affectionately known as Chinook. Much of this acreage is protected by a conservation easement in partnership with the Whidbey Camano Land Trust. The beauty of this shared place, and the potent sense of "home" it instills, has been remarked upon by countless visitors over the years. We have grown from an inspiring idea to a beloved organization with professional staff, year-round programs, unique collaborative partners, new facilities and nationwide presence and reach. The vision, wisdom, commitment, hard work, and financial generosity of many people have brought the Whidbey Institute to the present. On behalf of the founders, the builders, the staff and volunteers who make up the fabric of this home, we welcome you. Sources: Chinook Learning Community

Selected Search Terms

Subjects: Collective settlements; Organic farming; Sustainable agriculture; Permaculture; Spiritual retreat centers

Administrative Information

Copyright Status: Digital Image Copyright ©2020 University of Southern Indiana Library. All Rights Reserved. Personnel, student records, and other personal information in the records are restricted. All other material is open to the public without restrictions. Copyright laws of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) govern the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Access: Personnel and students records and other personal information in these records are restricted. All other material is open to the public without restrictions. Copyright laws of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) govern the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Contents	Date	Container	Folder	Location
Program Guides and Events	1981 - 1997	Filing Cabinet	Folder 1	Filing Cabinet 11-E