BIOETHICS SERIES. "Theological Reflections, Human Life in Our Day," will be the second topic explored in the ISUE sponsored lecture/discussion series, Bioethics: The Interface of Biology and Society, April 7.

Dr. Richard A. McCormick, S.J., the Rose Kennedy Professor of Christian Ethics, Kennedy Institute, Center for Bioethics, Georgetown University and research associate at Woodstock Theological Center, will be discussing the evening's topic via a broadcast originating at Ball State University. Following his comments a panel of local persons will react to the topic and lead discussion from the audience.

Members of the local panel will be BERNARD LUTZ, coordinator of campus ministry, ISUE; Dr. Robert Kress, Associate Professor, Philosophy and Religion, UE; and Rev. Ann Melanson, R.N. and Minister, First Presbyterian, Evansville.

The session is open to the public and will meet in A34 of the Administration Building at 7:00 p.m. Four subsequent community forums will be presented on Thursday evenings at ISUE. The programs are designed to make the public aware of the dimensions and potential of biological technological issues facing today's society. Admission is free. The program is sponsored by ISUE Campus Ministry and Continuing Education.
