USI Children's Center receives NAEYC accreditation

In May, the USI Children's Center was granted accreditation by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC). The accreditation remains in effect through April 2003.

"The heart of NAEYC accreditation focuses on the child's experience," said Ms. Pamela Buschkill, director of the Children's Center. The process considers health and safety, staffing and staff qualifications, and the physical environment. The greatest emphasis is on the children's relationships with the staff and how the program helps each child grow and learn intellectually, physically, socially, and emotionally.

USI Children's Center is licensed to serve 44 children between the ages of three and seven. The facility currently serves 60 families due to flex-timing, which allows a parent to bring a child for short time periods of the day without charging for the entire day. Of the 60 families served, 75 percent are student families, 22 percent are USI employee families, and three percent are community families. Community families are served if there are openings after university families are registered.

Ms. Buschkill said, "We believe that education begins at birth. We create an environment that encourages children to develop their capabilities and interests at their own pace and according to their individual needs. We recognize the uniqueness of each child and provide positive encouragement for the child's continued growth."

USI Children's Center goals are for the children to experience a sense of self-esteem, exhibit a positive attitude toward life, demonstrate cooperative, pro-social behavior, acquire learning and problem solving skills, expand logical thinking skills, and to use all senses in learning.

USI Children's Center lead teachers are Jean Cobb, Virgie Szalga, and Sue Ealum. During the fall and spring semesters 10 to 12 USI students work as teaching assistants. Student teaching assistants this summer are Kelli Reidford (graduate), Stacy Kubida, and Nicole Fleming.

NAEYC accreditation has been achieved by approximately seven percent of early childhood programs nationwide - some 6,943 programs as of December 1999, serving 635,190 children. NAEYC accreditation is a rigorous, voluntary process by which early childhood programs demonstrate that they meet national standards of excellence. Childcare centers, preschools, kindergartens, and before- and after-school programs are eligible to seek NAEYC accreditation. Approximately 15,000 programs are engaged in seeking accreditation.

Catholic priest to exhibit his work at New Harmony Gallery

Lam Nguyen, a Catholic priest who teaches at University of Notre Dame, will exhibit his work at the New Harmony Gallery of Contemporary Art from Friday, June 30, through Saturday, August 12. A free public reception will be held for the artist from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday, June 30.

The Reverend Nguyen's work in the exhibition will include a floor-to-ceiling sculptural installation comprised of 500 drawings with a total of 3,000 mountain images, the approximate number of mountains in Ha Long Bay in the Gulf of Tonkin, North Vietnam. In 1979, Reverend Nguyen passed through this archipelago as he and 50 others escaped from Vietnam in two fishing boats.

Each of the mountains in his drawings is labeled and represents a person or event in the artist's past. These reflections began as a daily journal counting backwards from the day he began to write in April 1999. The result is a 100-page account of being separated from family, escaping war, and surviving the journey to freedom with 3,000 dates encompassing 40 years. After finishing the journal, Reverend Nguyen created the drawings using principles of Zen meditation as a guiding force. The journal will be part of the exhibit.

The exhibition is possible through the support of USI and the Indiana Arts Commission.

Names in the News

Dr. Phyllis Hipps, assistant professor of social work, and Dr. Paul Frazer, assistant professor of social work, presented "DSM-IV and Culturally Sensitive Diagnoses" at the National Association of Social Workers annual state conference.

Mr. James Johnson, assistant director of Student Development, and Barry Magee from Indiana University Bloomington received a research grant of $3,500 from the Center for the Study of the College Fraternity. They will use the grant to create a follow-up report to the 1976 document "Fraternity for the Year 2000." This project will utilize qualitative research methods and will convene national fraternity and sorority leaders to reflect on the 1976 document, assess the current state of fraternity and sorority life in America, and develop questions for future research on the American college fraternity movement.

Dr. Thomas Pickering, dean of the Bower-Suhrheinrich School of Education and Human Services, was installed as president of the Indiana Association of Colleges for Teacher Education (IACTE) in April. IACTE's member institutions are the 40 colleges and universities in the state that offer teacher education programs. The state association is an affiliate of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. Dr. Pickering served last year as vice president of the association and has been on the executive board for the past three years.

Ms. Jennifer Walker, associate director of Career Services and Placement, co-chaired the 2000 Career Development Professionals of Indiana's Summer Institute in Indianapolis in June. The Institute was an intensive opportunity for career professionals throughout the Midwest to interact with leading Indiana professionals in the career development field and with fellow Institute participants through case studies and role-plays. Ms. Marilyn Schmidt, director of Career Services and Placement, served as a faculty member for the summer institute.
