USI benefactor Carter dies

A USI friend and benefactor of higher education in Evansville, Jennings "Nick" Carter, 94, died December 13 at his retirement home in Vero Beach, Fla.

Carter, who made his fortune in the mortgage business, will be remembered for the $1 million gifts he gave not only to University of Southern Indiana but also to University of Evansville and Ivy Tech State College.

His first $1 million gift to USI in 1994 established a scholarship fund for students with financial need whose obligations required them to work full time. In addition to monetary assistance, Carter extended his friendship to the scholars who were free to contact him at any time.

An Indiana University graduate, Carter had firsthand experience with the financial struggles of college students. He flunked out his first year because he had to work so much.

Carter's first wife also worked her way through college. The University's Carter Hall is named for Josephine K. Carter, who died in 1996.

Carter later married Ann Brightmire, and the couple continued to support education in Evansville.

A memorial service is planned January 18 in Vero Beach. Memorial gifts may be made to the Nick and Jo Carter Scholarship Fund in USI Foundation or to the Carter Fund at First Presbyterian Church, 609 S.E. Second St., Evansville IN 47713.

USI Audubon program airing on WNIN

A one-hour television documentary produced by Instructional Technology Services will broadcast January 13 on Channel 9 WNIN-TV, the Evansville PBS affiliate.

Hosted by Michael Aakhus, master printmaker and professor of art, the program chronicles the first pulling of a print from the original John James Audubon copper plate of the Tell-Tale Godwit in more than 160 years.

Pulling the Audubon Print, which will air at 10 p.m., features the print pulling ceremony conducted in the USI Art Studio August 1.

The plate is part of the collection of the John James Audubon Museum in Henderson. It is one of only 78 remaining plates from the original 435 used in the printing of Audubon's masterpiece, The Birds of America.

Don Boarman, Audubon Museum curator, provides historical perspective for the program.

Instructional Technology Services' Andrew Black, Emmy award-winning producer/director, and David LeRoy, producer/director, created the documentary.

Students win problem-solving contest

The solution of where to eat has become easier for two USI students who won the University's fall mathematics problem-solving contest and earned gift certificates for steak dinners at a local restaurant.

The two students are Josh Nicotra, a junior math major from Mount Vernon, and Kasey Ford, a junior psychology major from Lawrenceville, Ill. They amassed the most points in a contest that presented a weekly math problem.

"The contest, open to USI students, faculty, and staff, did not require mathematics beyond algebra and seldom required algebra," according to Dr. Ruben Schwieger, associate professor of mathematics, who helped coordinate the contest.

Prizes from local restaurants were offered for the best solution each week. Steak dinners were the grand prize for the semester's two most successful problem solvers.

Each participant had to submit a written solution statement with clear diagrams, charts, lists, or records of calculator or computer work. A sample problem follows:

"Pat has a miniature farm and will buy some cows, sheep, and pigs. Cows cost $3 each, sheep cost $2 each, and pigs cost 50-cents each. If Pat spends exactly $100 for exactly 100 animals, how many of each did Pat buy?"

A new contest will be offered in the spring semester.
