Openings still are available in two professional development programs being offered by the University of Southern Indiana's Office of Continuing Education this spring at Henderson Community College. Both courses are part of the Certificate in Management Program developed by USI in association with the American Management Association, but are open to other interested professionals.

A six-week class on Fundamentals of Finance and Accounting for Nonfinancial Managers starts February 19, offering participants the confidence to deal effectively with financial experts. It will be taught by James Morton, Administrative Services manager at Accuride Corporation. The registration fee is $150.

The second course -- Communications Skills for Managers, a six-week class starting February 21 -- takes the guesswork out of effective communication. It will be taught by Arlene Bowman and Cathy Hunt, associate professors at the Henderson college. The fee is $150.

Call the USI Office of Continuing Education, 812/464-1863, for information or to register.
