ISUE OPEN CHANNEL. (by Candy Mulkey, Director). Please announce in your classes.

Have you heard the phrase "ISUE Open Channel" on campus lately? Been puzzled by this ominous phrase? ISUE Open Channel is a new project undertaken by the Communications Arts Club and it is concerned with broadcasting news for the ISUE campus. Students volunteer to appear before the camera, write their own copy, or help produce this half-hour video-taped news program. ISUE Open Channel is presently being taped every other Wednesday night from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. Playback for the student body is then scheduled the following Thursday and Friday. Regular features include an activities calendar, debates on controversial subjects, man-on-the-street interviews with students of ISUE, and polls of students on a topic of the week. Some of the Open Channel special entertainment features have included a magic demonstration by Mike Eakins, and poetry by Victor Stone.

ISUE Open Channel would like to become a sort of public access to students, faculty, and staff at ISUE. If you have a club or organization announcement, or if you want to have some air time devoted to something you believe is important, or if you would like to share your special talent with ISUE Open Channel, just drop a note in the Communications Arts Club organizational mailbox in the Administration Building. Plan to attend the next taping session, November 13, and see ISUE Open Channel in action. Sessions are taped in Room 34. The playback times for the show will be November 14 at 11 a.m. in the Red Carpet Area, November 15 at 10 a.m. near the Forum, and again at 11 a.m. in the Red Carpet area.
