COMMUNAL SOCIETIES CONFERENCE. More than 125 scholars, museum directors, communitarians, and students from as far away as Oregon, Massachusetts, and Israel attended the ninth annual Historic Communal Societies Conference at Shakertown at South Union and Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green, October 14 through 16. Numerous universities were represented along with representatives from 24 historic communal sites and four current communal groups.

The ISUE Center for Communal Studies, which is directed by Dr. Donald Pitzer, professor of history, co-sponsored this event along with the National Historic Communal Societies Association, South Union Shakertown, and Western Kentucky University. Radio and television coverage was given to several features of the meeting--a performance by the Shaker Singers of WKU, and interview with Dr. Yaacov Oved and Aharon Yadlin from two Israeli kibbutzim, and the tour of the Julia Neal Collection of Shaker materials in the Kentucky Library on the WKU campus.

COMMUNAL SOCIETIES (continued). Each person who attended the conference received a free recording of historic communal music titled "American Communal Music of the 18th and 19th Centuries" and a free copy of the NHCSA journal, Communal Societies, which contained essays on communal music from last year's conference at Ephrata, Pennsylvania. These items were compliments of two grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities totalling over $34,000.

Next year's tenth anniversary Historic Communal Societies Conference returns to New Harmony, Indiana, where it all began in 1974. This will be a "World Utopian Communities" conference scheduled for October 13 - 16, 1983. Speakers are expected from Japan, England, Canada, Germany, and Israel as well as the United States. Faculty, staff, and students from ISUE are invited to attend and participate. Those wishing to present formal papers should contact the program chairman, Dr. Charles Petranek, associate professor of sociology, before March 1, 1983. Dr. Pitzer will be offering History 400 for students who wish to earn one hour credit for studies involving the conference.
