Openings still are available in a day-long course on Saturday, March 18, at the New Harmony Gallery of Contemporary Art in which the novice art collector can learn three facets of collection and conservation.

Instructors for the course, sponsored by the University of Southern Indiana Office of Continuing Education, will be Connie Weinzapfel, director of the New Harmony Gallery; Michael Aakhus, USI associate professor of art; and Curtis Uebelhor, exhibits preparator at the Gallery.

Participants will be offered "Contemporary Art," a slide presentation to familiarize them with various styles and types of contemporary art and the dos and don'ts in purchasing fine arts and crafts; "Identifying Prints," covering methods of printmaking and how to tell an original from a reproduction; and "Conservation and Decorative Framing." Personally-owned prints may be brought for identification.

The registration fee is $30. Call the USI Office of Continuing Education, (812) 464-1863, for information or to register.
