VIEWPOINT

The following comments were made by panel members on the Symposium on Aged held on campus April 1, 1974.

"When young people think of Social Security, they usually think of old couples sitting on porches in rocking chairs. They fail to realize the many thousands of benefits made to survivors in case of death or disability. In a school this size, I would say there are many students here drawing benefits from deceased or disabled parents. You should think of social security as a basic floor on which to plan your insurance and retirement program."

Dwight Swope, District Manager,
Evansville Social Security Administration

"One greatest need of elderly people today can't be found in a pillbox or even in the best equipped hospital room, but you can find it under the file of TLC--tender loving care. When elderly people are neglected, they lose interest in life and become immobile. They don't want sympathy, just an opportunity to remain active and contribute in some way. It is important to go on living, but even more so to go on living and ENJOYING life. Elderly people are so appreciative of attentions and small favors, that senior citizen volunteers find that they receive much more than they give."

Helen Barthel, Representative from Council on Aging & Director, Senior Citizens
Volunteer Program

"If you students wonder why you should be concerned with senior citizens, you will be interested to know that many of you are older biologically than your exact age. What you do with yourself physically and nutritionally now, not only determines how well you will function, but what kind of condition you will be in when you reach your seniority."

Planning ahead is important. Too many people retire, make a trip to Florida and don't like it, fish themselves out, finish all the odd chores around the house, and now she wants him out from underfoot. Then if he can't find a job or something to keep him interested and active, he goes downhill. It's almost as if when people stop having something to live for, they simply stop living."

William Lyle, Chief
Out-Patient Service, SW Ind. Mental Health Center
