PROJECT COMMITMENT is a program designed to promote and encourage good inter-group relations. PROJECT COMMITMENT meets once a week for six weeks. These small groups are so arranged that they include a mixture of race, age, sex, and income groups. Each discussion group continues to meet together every week. As members of the group come to know and trust one another, mental blocks, prejudices, and social barriers begin to crumble. In the final session an opportunity is given for COMMITMENT to on-going actions that flow from a common change of attitude.
