Betty Vawter named USI writer/editor

For immediate release
February 25, 1997

Betty Vawter has been named a telecommuting writer/editor in News and Information Services at the University of Southern Indiana.

Kathy Funke, department director, said Vawter will work primarily from her home in the department's first telecommuting effort. Vawter will have responsibility for 8600 University Boulevard magazine, school newsletters, and other University publications.

Vawter is a native of Tullahoma, Tennessee, and received a B.S. in journalism from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Prior to coming to Evansville, she was public relations director for Webb School, Knoxville, an independent day school for grades 5 to 12.
