"From Bartering to Banking" will be the theme of the first spring "Super Saturday" program for children -- pre-kindergarten through eighth grade -- slated February 25 at the University of Southern Indiana.

Various age groups will study the concept of money as a medium of exchange, the history of coins and paper money, and how the U.S. economy works. The day's program will focus on personal economy and how children can learn to practice it.

The $25 registration fee includes lunch. Call the USI Office of Continuing Education, (812) 464-1863, for information or to register.
