for over 50 years. In 1956, she played her first notes on a fiddle and has been competing and winning fiddling contests ever since. Her latest triumphs include being the first woman to win the Sam McCrackin Memorial Trophy, and winning the senior division championship at the national convention of the Old Time Fiddlers Association. She and her husband Jake, a master of the banjo, were sponsored by the Smithsonian to play at a folk music event in Montreal, Canada, in 1971, to perform and run a clinic at the University of Nebraska, and to play at Washington University in St. Louis. For 34 years they spent three months of each year living in a camper while attending and playing at fiddling and folk music events. The other nine months, they usually farmed in northern Carroll County, Kentucky.

The Humanities Forums are free and open to the public.

UNITED WAY CAMPAIGN BEGINS. The ISUE United Way Committee is currently preparing for the 1978-1979 fund drive. This year it is hoped that support can be increased and to achieve as close to 100% participation as possible. To accomplish this goal, each employee will be personally contacted during the coming weeks and given an opportunity to make a donation or pledge.

The money collected will assist 32 different local organizations which depend on community support. Without the support of the United Way campaign, these important community services would not be able to function. It is the best way to help the most people at the lowest possible cost. Individually, we can not help all the people who need help, even though we might want to. But we can help others help people through the United Way.

Universities have the reputation of striving to improve human conditions and providing support to the community. One way ISUE employees can help to foster this reputation is to support the United Way Campaign with a donation or pledge. Almost every day ISUE must ask the community to support its programs. This is an opportunity to return the favor.

Contact BOB HARPER, ISUE United Way Chairman, for additional information about the United Way campaign, extension 1867.
