

February 19, 2001

Photo/Video Advisory

College students to meet at USI for housing conference

When 160 college students assemble for a housing conference, they come with energy and generate more spirit as the weekend unfolds. Delegates from 12 Indiana colleges and universities will convene for the Indiana Residence Hall Organization conference on the University of Southern Indiana campus on Friday, February 23 through Sunday, February 25.

Delegates will be introduced during roll call at 8:30 p.m. on Friday in Forum I of the Wright Administration Building. Sporting a military theme and the slogan Storming into the New Millennium, each delegation will perform an original cadence. The delegates are encouraged to share the enthusiasm they have for their own university or college at this time.

Jennifer Smith, area coordinator in Residence Life and conference coordinator, said this is the first state-wide conference hosted on the USI campus by a student organization. USI students Cori Smith and Jamie Patrick, Student Housing Association vice president, are co-chairs of the conference.

Each school delegation will have an opportunity to offer programs on leadership, diversity, motivation, and team building during the three-day conference.

Schools sending delegations are Rose Hulman Institute of Technology, Valparaiso University, Ball State University, Butler University, DePauw University, Indiana University, Indiana State University, Manchester College, Purdue University, St. Mary's College, University of Evansville, University of Indianapolis, and USI.

Sent to photo desks Courier & Press, The Shield; assignment editors at television stations