July 25, 1991

Lynn M. Jackson has assumed duties as coordinator of Business and Professional Programs and administrator of the Management Diagnostic Center in the Office of Continuing Education at the University of Southern Indiana.

Jackson has been a member of the training and development community since 1985, working as an internal training professional with a life insurance company and later operating her own training and development business in Indianapolis.

Jackson received a master's degree from Indiana University in 1989 in the fields of instructional systems technology and counseling. She is certified in administration of both the Myers-Briggs and Wilson learning instruments. She is a member of the Central Indiana Chapter, American Society for Training and Development, and served CIC as past board member and conference developer/planner.
