Openings still are available in two day-long seminars at the University of Southern Indiana designed to aid the professional in developing efficiency and problem solving techniques.

Ross Van Ness, director of Professional Program Development at Ball State University who is an adult educator, psychologist, author, and humanist, will be the instructor for the workshops -- "Planning and Organizing Your Time and Your Work" on Thursday, May 18, and "Problem Solving and Decision Making Techniques" on Friday, May 19. Both will be held in the University Conference Center.

The $85 registration fee for each workshop ($75 each for two or more registering together) covers lunch and materials. Call the USI Office of Continuing Education, (812) 464-1863, for information or to register.
