DONALDSON AWARDED LILLY FELLOWSHIP.

DR. SUSAN DONALDSON, Associate Professor of Psychology, is among 12 winners of the Lilly Endowment's 1978-79 Faculty Open Fellowship competition.

DR. DONALDSON'S fellowship will enable her to pursue further study and research into the care, feeding and behavior of wild animals in a semi-natural environment. Her initial interest in this area began when she discovered that Mesker Park Zoo in Evansville was the only place in the U.S. where capybaras (the oldest and largest rodent, weighing as much as 200 pounds) bred, and she and some of her students decided to find out why. The project's success not only benefited her and her students, but also eventually benefited Venezuela's program to domesticate capybaras for meat and fur.

She will use her fellowship to visit the Smithsonian National Park and the Smithsonian's breeding park in Virginia, the San Diego Zoo and a wild animal park outside San Diego. She will give attention in her research only to those animals in a semi-natural environment, studying their maintenance and reproduction. The knowledge will allow her to make the best use of a cooperative arrangement with Mesker Park Zoo, whereby it can become both a student laboratory and a research station for the ISUE psychology department.

The fellowship provides DR. DONALDSON with funds of $4,408.00 for her travel and research.

According to the Lilly Endowment, Inc., this is the fourth year that the Indianapolis-based philanthropic foundation has selected Indiana college and University faculty members to receive fellowships.
