News from the University of Southern Indiana

USI administrator elected president of MCEIA

Pam Doerter, Internship and Co-op coordinator in Career Services and Placement at the University of Southern Indiana, was recently installed as president of Midwest Cooperative Education and Internship Association (MCEIA)). This professional organization is comprised of educators and employers within a nine Midwestern-state region who work with interns and co-op students. The non-profit organization promotes the growth and advancement of cooperative education. MCEIA is a source of information about co-ops and internships and fosters a working relationship with national, state, and local groups which promote internships and cooperative education.

Through sharing of ideas and techniques, membership in MCEIA enhances programming used by universities and employers.

Doerter has been at USI for eight years. She is married and has three sons.
