Thirty teachers from across Indiana have been selected to participate in an intensive study of historic southern Indiana in a two-year program funded through a $272,000 grant from the Education Division of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

"Indiana and the New Nation, 1776-1876" was developed by Historic Southern Indiana Project, an alliance of educators, economic development officials, and historic resource managers in the Ohio and lower Wabash river valleys. The program will bring the teachers together with nationally prominent scholars for two summer institutes (July 10-28, 1989, and July 9-27, 1990). The themes -- "Establishing Order on the Trans-Appalachian Frontier, 1776-1825" and "Community Building in Nineteenth Century Indiana, 1814-1876: Contrasting Examples" -- are suggested by several important historic sites in the region which will be an integral part of the learning experience. There also will be four weekend teaching seminars exploring the implications of the summer institutes for the Indiana classroom.

The program seeks to enrich the participant's knowledge and understanding of this part of American history and to strengthen the connection between the classroom and the varied historical resources in southern Indiana, thus enhancing the Indiana curriculum for the twenty-first century. The program is being supervised by Dr. Darrel E. Bigham, professor of history at the University of Southern Indiana and HSIP project director, with the aid of a statewide advisory committee and the grant project coordinator, Ms. Leigh Ann Chamness, who previously was involved with education and research with Historic New Harmony.

Teachers selected to participate include:

Mary E. Anthrop, 100 E. 600 N, West Lafayette - Central Catholic Junior-Senior High School, Lafayette
