USI to host presentation on chemistry in global security

The University of Southern Indiana chapter of the American Chemical Society (ACS) will present "The Role of Chemistry in Global Security" at 6 p.m. Tuesday, February 9 in Forum 2 inside the Wright Administration Building. The event is free and open to the public.

The event, part of the ACS Program-in-a-Box series, looks at the history of chemistry's involvement in matters of global security, including chemical and biological warfare, and gives behind-the-scenes looks at how chemists and government agents work together to counter chemical-based threats. This program is supported in part through a financial sponsorship from Proctor & Gamble.

Additional activities and raffle prizes will be available for attendees. For more information, contact Darlene Ingram at ddingram@usi.edu or at 812-464-1701.
