Student talent in the spotlight

USI Live at the Apollo will showcase student talent October 19 at Carter Hall in the University of Southern Indiana University Center. The show, performed by USI students, will begin at 6 p.m. Admission is free.

Talents being judged include singing, rap, dance, instrument, poetry, skit, and stand-up comedy. Awards will be given for first-, second-, and third-place.

"I enjoy the show because of the different kinds of talent that the students are able to perform," said Anteia Greer, a senior from Princeton.

Greer and Tameka Warren, a sophomore from Evansville, will be performing in the skit category.

"We are performing an inspirational skit promoting a positive lifestyle for all age groups," said Warren.

The talent show provides a way for more USI students to get involved, said Greer.

Anyone with questions concerning the talent show should contact the Multicultural Center at 465-7188.
