Instructor pleas 'not guilty' for drug possession

By JESSIE HELLMANN
News editor

Gerald McIntyre, a USI temporary instructor who was arrested for possession of cocaine and marijuana, appeared in court and filed a “not guilty” plea Monday.

McIntyre posted a $500 bond. His next court date is scheduled for March 19.

McIntyre was hired to guest direct USI’s upcoming play “Twilight: Los Angeles, 1992” and to teach a special topics theatre course. He was arrested Feb. 5 in his on-campus apartment after having cocaine and marijuana mailed to him. McIntyre resigned Feb. 6.

Performing Arts Department Chair Elliot Wasserman took over the play McIntyre was directing, according to a statement released by the department.

When approached by The Shield, Wasserman said he had no other comments.

Liberal Arts Dean Michael Aakhus did not return any calls from The Shield for comment.

Provost Ron Rochon said McIntyre’s Theatre 499 Special Topics dance course will be taught by a replacement instructor that Wasserman will pick.

The instructor will be a temporary hire, like McIntyre, and will be someone who isn’t currently employed by the university.

Rochon said he doesn’t know who suggested that McIntyre be hired.

“It’s even more unacceptable that it was a faculty member. They should be held to the same standards as students. Bottom line.”

“The university hired him,” Rochon said. “I don’t know the exact history of how McIntyre became affiliated with the university.”

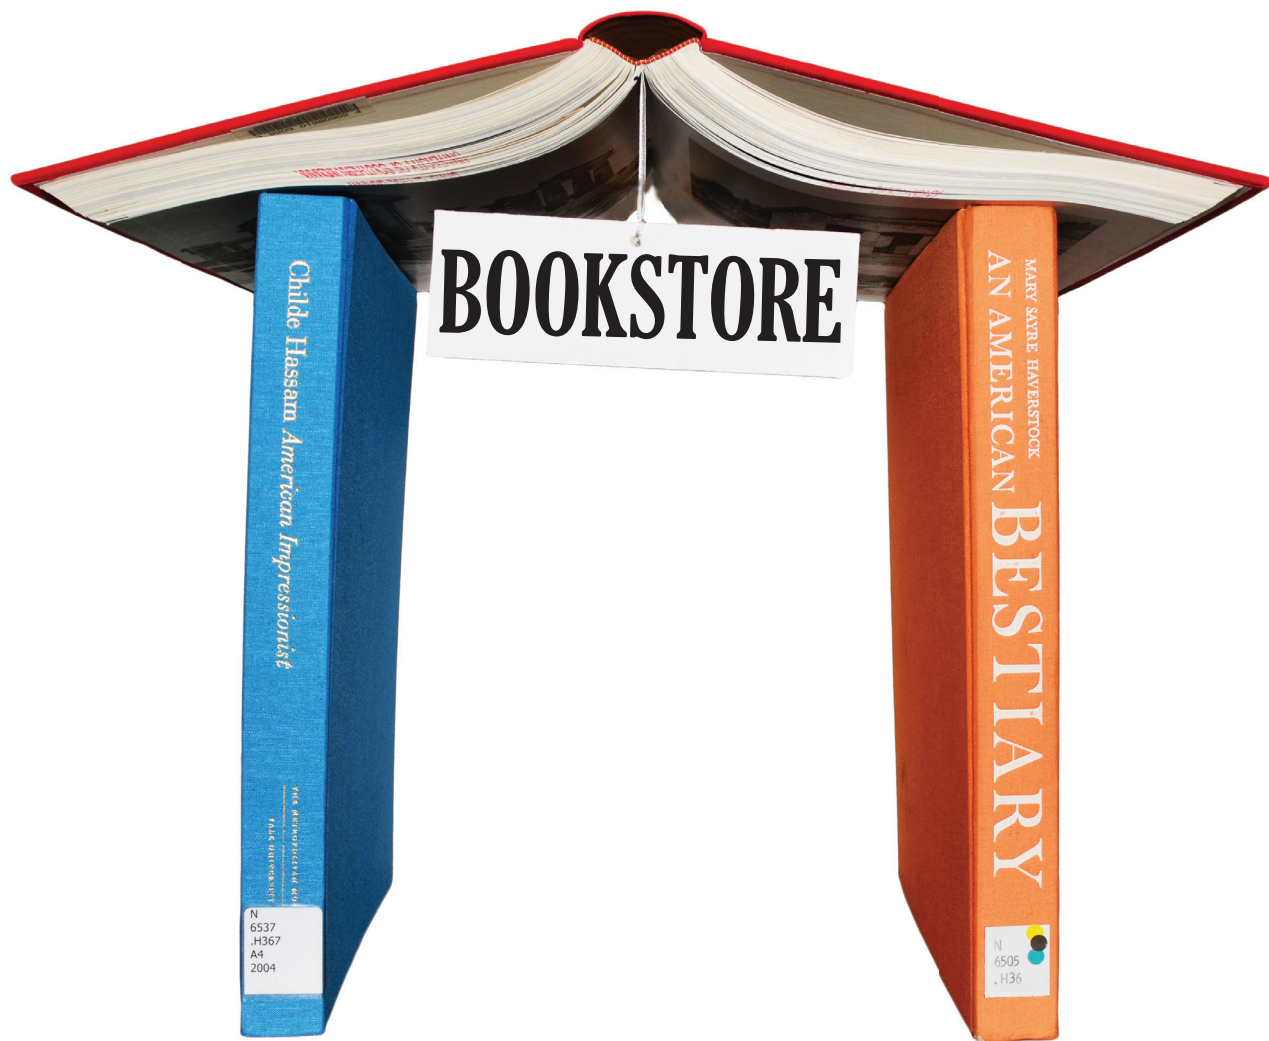

Rochon said temporary hires, or part-time employees, are not drug tested or background checked.

“I don’t believe most part-time hires go through background checks,” Rochon said. “I’m quite confident that our temporary hires do not go through that.”

Marissa Curry, a student who lives in the building McIntyre was staying in, said she witnessed the arrest.

“(My roommates and I) saw a sheriff’s officer come out of Morton, and then another, and then two Evansville Police Department officers came out, and a security guard and two more sheriff’s

PREPARATION FOR RENOVATIONS

Bookstore temporarily relocating for construction

By JESSIE HELLMANN
News editor

Soon, the ground level of the Cone will serve a purpose beyond providing students a place to eat or hang out.

As the USI Bookstore nears the final stage of its construction, books and other supplies will be sold in the cone starting March 18.

“(Construction workers) are going to gut the bookstore,” said Mike Goelzhauser, director of the bookstore. “Everything is coming out - going to be brand new. Nothing will look the same.”

The construction is the final stage of the bookstore’s two-phase renovation. The first phase, which took place over the summer, involved fixing pipes above the bookstore.

Among the things that will be brand new is an Apple Store, which will sell all Apple electronics except iPhones, Goelzhauser said.

Goelzhauser said students who need to purchase books from the bookstore need to do so by Friday.

He said books not sold by then will be shipped back because the bookstore doesn’t have anywhere to store them.

“The majority of the books will be returned by the time spring break begins,” he said.

Student Government to hold elections

By JESSICA STALLINGS
Staff writer

Elections for the Student Government Association (SGA) are approaching, and the organization is encouraging students to run for positions.

Election packets became available to students Feb. 4. Packets consist of application deadlines, an application, qualifications and two pages for signatures. Packets need to be turned in by Feb. 20 to the Dean of Students Office in University Center (UC) East.

Adam Brothers, SGA chief justice, said many packets have already been picked up by students. Brothers said being a part of SGA helps students with commitment and confidence while providing them with skills in organization, time management and speaking.

“It will show that you are willing to get involved,” Brothers said. “It shows that you are willing to step out of a comfort zone, that you want to make a change and are willing to work for people.”

Chelsea Schmidt, SGA administrative vice president of external relations, said the SGA election process creates an exciting environment where students are encouraged to get involved.

“Being able to identify a problem or place for improvement on campus and visibly see the change made offers a great feeling of accomplishment,” said

Schmidt.

Schmidt said she has gained not only knowledge about the university but skills for after she graduates, also.

“Through SGA, I’ve learned a lot about the university and how it operates, as well as many fundamental skills I’ll use once I leave here as a graduate,” Schmidt said. “Through my position, I’ve learned that good communication skills are essential for the success of any individual or organization.”

Donald McGrath, SGA chief financial officer, deals with helping student organizations gain money for trips. He said he feels these grants open doors for students and that if there is no door

Corrections

In last week's "Amy and Anthony" couple story, a paragraph was printed incorrectly. It should have read as follows:

Since Amy, an only child, opted to keep her maiden name, they jokingly say Anthony became Mr. Montz. They both refer to their family, which includes a dog named Harley Quinn, as the Montztalas - a combination of their names.

"It meant an awful lot to her father that she was Dr. Montz, and after working so hard to be Dr. Montz, I actually felt unfair making her change that," Anthony said.

Also, last week's "Latin restaurant brings V-Day special" article was written by Ariana Beedie. She is a staff writer for The Shield.

Bill could ease military-to-school transition

By JESSIE HELLMANN
News editor

A piece of legislation could make college life easier for veteran students in Indiana.

The bill's author, State Senator Sue Glick (R - La-Grange), said the bill, Senate Bill 115, would ease the transition process for recent veterans who want to attend college.

Glick said young veterans who face confusion about the college admission process inspired her to draft the bill.

"A lot of the younger vets are telling me that (the admission process is) very difficult, especially on bigger campuses," Glick said. "They aren't familiar with everything available to them and what they need to do."

The bill would require "state education institutions" to provide a centralized location for admissions, registration and financial administration services. It would also provide accommodations for veteran students who are disabled at the schools fitness facility. "We're just trying to make it an easier transition for them from the military to the academic situation," Glick said.

She said many of the student veterans haven't gone through traditional application processes, orientations or anything similar.

She said her family also inspired her to draft the bill.

"I've been working with veterans over last couple years," Glick said. "My father was a veteran; my husband was; we've had some in the family."

She said this bill would not only help veterans but would help schools as well.

"They're an asset to our population because they've already been through so much," she said. Her proposed bill has gathered a lot of support.

Seven senators have been added as co-authors, and representatives from Indiana University and Purdue University have spoken in support of it.

The proposed legislation was referred to the Committee on Education and Career Development.

Sophomore biology major Luke Williams, who is also a specialist in the military, said overall the bill is good, but he also thinks the bill gives advantages that non-veterans don't have access to, such as part of the bill that requires universities to develop job search programs designed for student veterans.

"Why wouldn't that be available to a non-veteran?" he said. "The job market sucks. Shouldn't all get help with job searching?"

He said having universities provide centralized locations for admissions for veterans is somewhat unfair.

"It seems like discrimination," he said. "Instead of helping, they're having them go to a different location."

He said one part of the proposed bill that he agrees with is the requirement that states universities must develop programs to provide reasonable access to specialized counseling services of resources for veteran students suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD).

"Not a lot of people know signs of PTSD," he said. "If my buddy is hurting, I want to help him. Who wouldn't want to help a vet?"

He said overall the bill is good.

"I'm just worried it's going to be biased and (wonder) how they're going to implement the things without causing harm to others," Williams said.

wski said.

The locally-based construction companies - Empire Construction, Deig Brothers Construction, Alva Electric and Hafer Associates - are working on the tunnel, which runs water, communication and electricity underground.

The tunnel will go under University Boulevard and stop near the pool at the Recreation, Fitness and Wellness Center, connecting to the other tunnels. They are also working on the concrete foundation of the theatre.

Gary Burgdorf, construction administrator for the physical plant, said the construction still has a long way to go and that it is not going as fast as they wanted.

"With the snow we had over Christmas break, ice and six-inch rain, things have gotten real sloppy," Burgdorf said.

Burgdorf said the new theatre will have a lower level that holds the dressing rooms and restrooms.

They still need to dig deep enough for an elevator, but they have come across a problem.

"We have hit rock," Burgdorf said. "Now we're going to have to excavate through rock to be able to dig deep enough for what we need to do."

The construction shouldn't affect campus life anymore than it does now, he said.

When students come back in the fall, the biggest part of the steel will be up, and they will be working on the mechanicals, duct work and fireproofing, Burgdorf said.

The total cost of the Teaching Theatre is $16 million.

Of that cost, $13 million came from a borrowed-state bond, and the rest is funded through donations and from the university.

Burgdorf said the new theatre is going to be everything USI wanted it to be and will attract prospective students.

"The sound equipment and lighting is going to be state of the art," Burgdorf said. "It's going to sound just as good as any place in the country."

Sam Wentzel, sophomore theatre major, said he is excited about having a separate building and gaining new opportunities.

"The Malette Studio Theatre we are currently using only has so much to offer, but this new one will feature so many exciting opportunities," Wentzel said.

Wentzel said the Teaching Theatre will show how USI represents the arts.

"There will literally not be one bad seat in a theatre that seats over 300," said Wentzel.

maybe having doubts or having issues with some of the academic policies and so forth," Tribble said. "We feel that this is a very important office. It's doing a lot for a large community of students."

The office is lacking funding, she said. It has been funded by two grants the Registrar's Office received from the Military Family Research Institute at Purdue University and made possible through funding from Lilly Endowment, Inc., she said.

The first $50,000 grant ran from July 2010 through June 2011 and the second $95,000 grant was in effect from July 2011 through June 2012.

The funds were used in the Veterans Support Services office to expand programming for veterans, their families and active duty service members, she said.

Furniture, computers and printers for the lounge were purchased through the grants plus additional funding through the Office of the Provost, she said.

She said the office is trying to find a permanent funding source.

"We're putting in a budget request to the university, and we feel that we have the justification to fund it," Tribble said. "But (USI President) Dr. Bennett said money is really tight, and there are lots of other areas that need funding."

Bennett, who also attended the grand opening, said it's a good step forward.

"We have a feeling of caring about those who come to our campus," Bennett said. "I just think this is a good step forward. We want to be part of whatever we can do to help veterans take the next step."

FUND continued from Pg. 1

Both of her parents have been hospitalized. Her sibling overdosed and was in bad shape. There have been funerals she needed to attend.

"There have been good things as well, like graduations, military send-offs, stuff like that," Killham said. "I think if this was something that was put into place, well-organized and advertised well, tons of students would use it."

Freshman member at large Kerrick Gerst said she decided to sponsor the resolution because she thinks it would be very beneficial to the student population.

"I feel pretty confident in the proposal," Gerst said. "There are a few bumps that Travis and I will have to work out before it can be approved. After all of that, though, I think that it will have a strong footing and will get approved."

The Fund would be advertised well, she said.

"I am sure that the word about it will spread because of the emotional pull that students will feel from it," Gerst said.

The proposal was tabled, or postponed to be discussed, at the Feb. 14 General Assembly meeting.

The doctors are in: Glenwood

Students receive real patient interaction through new health centers

By ROBERTO CAMPOS
Staff Writer

The USI-Glenwood Community Health Center has seen more than 700 patients since opening its doors in the Glenwood Leadership Academy January 2012.

In that time it has not only provided an opportunity for members of the community to seek health service, it has also provided USI students with a chance to acquire real-world experience.

“Being able to work here is a wonderful opportunity that gets you down inside the city – it’s not a general clinical program,” social work student Elizabeth McCormick said. “This is something based out of USI, which gives the school a little bit better opportunity to integrate students into the inner-city. The area and the arena that Glenwood works within is an experience that most students wouldn’t get the chance to work with.”

McCormick, who is seeking her master’s, is an intern at the health center and is Glenwood’s first social work student.

Glenwood, as well as the newly opened Cedar Hall location, provide students from a multitude of fields to gain experience in such areas as: nursing, social work and dental hygiene.

“Students have helped evolve this practice,” Karen Puritt, Glenwood outreach and operations manager said. “The best thing about having these students is that they have a great opportunity for learning. They’ve been able to take things I don’t have time for and develop those ideas. It’s a great advantage for both the health center and students.”

Students also have a chance to apply what they learn in the classroom with patients.

“Here I take more of an active, listening role which is something I didn’t get a lot of experience with as an undergraduate student,” McCormick said. “So to be able to actually sit down with patients and utilize the social work skills I’ve learned as a bachelor’s student has been an awesome opportunity.”

A year since the opening, Glenwood has passed all expectations set for it in a grant that was provided to USI by the Health Resources and Service Administration. The health center took six years of planning and the help of local leaders like St. Mary’s and Evansville Vanderburgh School Corporation as well as previous dean of the College of Nursing, Nadine Coudret.

“We have surpassed all of the goals that were laid out for us in the grant provided by USI,” Puritt said. “One of our main goals now is marketing so that more people know we’re here providing health services to the public.”

Something that the health center also provides is an array of patients and situations that students might not normally see.

“Many of our patients here are complicated,” Suzi Baker, health center nurse practitioner said. “The advantage that this environment provides to students is a dynamic environment to learn from. It’s something that’s beneficial for students and the patients.”

The health center has had 300 patients return out of the 700-plus patients that they saw last year.

A fourth of those patients have been kids from the Glenwood Leadership Academy.

“I didn’t have a regular family doctor to see and I heard that Glenwood was a nice place to go and after I went I really liked it. James Kemp, a five-month patient at the health center, said, “I like the service, the friendly staff, and if you don’t have an appointment, they’ll do their best to fit you in. They just offer real great service.”

Something that the health center doesn’t want to become known for is being an urgent care center.

“We really want to become a primary care center,” Puritt said. “That is something that we have to work on and is another big goal for us.”

The USI-Glenwood Community Health Center is available to USI students and staff along with the Glenwood and Evansville community.

“We treat the whole patient here, not just the body, not just the mind,” McCormick said. “Physical, emotional, mental – we want to cover our bases because we see these patients as people. They’re not a number on a list.”

Film projector goes digital

By ROBERTO CAMPOS
Staff Writer

As the lights dim, everyone settles into their seats with popcorn and drinks in hand, waiting for the movie to begin. It’s an experience that’s familiar to many people, and one that’s started to change as more and more movie theaters gravitate towards presenting movies in a digital format.

Over winter break, USI opted to install a digital film projector in Forum 1 to replace its 35 mm film projector that was used to show a variety of movies on campus.

“It’s kind of unusual for the university to be right in line with an industry rather than catching up, so it’s very exciting,” said Eric Braysmith, an instructor of English at USI. “What’s interesting is that by the time that we started working towards purchasing the projector and installing it, that is the time that the movie industry tipped towards changing to digital.”

Braysmith teaches an Introduction to Film class on campus in Forum 1, and for the first time, he has started to show movies in a newer format than the previous movie industry standard of 35 mm film. It’s a standard that had been around for more than 100 years.

“For years the movie industry has talked about making this change from a film to digital format and finally, in the last six months, they’ve forced the issue and done it,” Braysmith said. “Once the industry makes this decision to jump formats we have to follow suit, or we won’t have any films to play because the theatrical films will all be digital and not 35 mm.”

The digital projector, which cost around $70,000, is something that’s “cost effective” in Braysmith’s opinion. As USI strives to become a 24/7 campus, showing movies was viewed as another opportunity to offer students more engaging experiences on campus.

“This is something that’s expensive in the beginning, but the ability to play a lot more films more often, and the number of students you can serve with hours of activities, makes an expensive projector not so expensive when you prorate it like that,” Braysmith said.

The timing for a digital projector couldn’t be better, Braysmith said, because the movie industry keeps moving forward and the university wants more activities for students.

“Everybody wins in this situation,” Braysmith said. “For me, it’s a great teaching tool. For (Activities Programming Board), it’s exactly what they need. And for the students, they get to sit down and watch movies the way they’re supposed to be seen - uninterrupted, start to finish - and they get to do that for free.”

APB played a key part in helping to find funding to purchase the projector. APB hosts a free weekly event called Cinema USI in Forum 1 and uses the new digital projector to showcase popular movies that students can enjoy.

“APB has had a film program for awhile, but it’s just been so-so,” said Kathy Jones, USI’s program adviser for student activities. “We would just show movies very inconsistently and we would just get any movie we could to show. We’ve really grown since those days. We show movies on a consistent weekly basis and try to make them movies students want to see.”

An advantage to having a digital projector at USI is that APB and Braysmith can now show movies that are currently playing in movie theaters. Movies that APB has lined up for its Cinema USI events this semester include “The Hobbit,” “Skyfall” and “Django Unchained.”

“One thing we do more of now is we pay attention to what movies are doing well in theaters,” Jones said. “If a movie does well, we will try and bring it here and advertise it early so students can see the movie for free rather than spend money at the movie theaters.”

APB has experienced success from this strategy. The first Cinema USI event this semester showcased the movie “Pitch Perfect” and filled almost every seat in Forum 1.

“When I heard about what movies Cinema USI would be showing, I was really excited,” said Briana Maddox, sophomore theatre arts major. “Some of the movies I haven’t seen in theaters, and I’m waiting to see here at USI because they’re free and it’s just like going to the movies.”

USI Cinema hosts its free showings at 9 p.m. on Thursdays and at 6 and 9 p.m. on Saturdays in Forum 1.

This week’s movie is “Wreck-It Ralph.”

Yellowstone National Park trip offers hands-on experience for students

By ARIANA BEEDIE
Staff writer

Geology students will apply skills from class when they venture to Yellowstone National Park this summer. Students enrolled in Geology 390: Geological Field Excursion will head out West for this year's annual caravan to an areas for hands-on study.

On July 6, students and faculty will head to Wyoming for a two-week study on the geological aspects of Yellowstone and the experience of geology outside the classroom.

There are 17 students enrolled in the spring seminar, all at different points in their geology careers. The course breaks into two parts - a one-night-a-week spring course and the actual field excursion in the summer.

Geology Professor Paul Doss will lead the class on the field excursion, and he said he is hopeful about the future trip.

"You can't do geology unless you're out in the field," he said. "You have to do the study first in the spring semester so that come July we can just pack up and hit the road."

The geology department has a budget specifically for field trips to allow students to apply what they have learned in the real world. Each geology course has a field trip planned, most of the time at no cost to students.

"Each department's budget accommodates differences in educational focus," Doss said. "We just have a larger field trip budget."

Travel, lodging and camping is covered by the department budget, and students are left to cover food and personal expenses. On the trip, students and faculty will have a communal food bank and eat all their meals together.

"It is amazing that we can take these kinds of trips," said Tony Maria, geology associate professor and second-in-command faculty member on the excursion.

Maria said the geology department's commitment to the field trip makes the department special.

"We realize that seeing geology is crucial for our students, so we have devoted a large portion of our annual budget toward facilitating trips like this," Maria said.

The summer excursions are a big deal for the department, and students are very excited to use the tools they have learned in the classroom out in the world.

Junior geology major Samantha McBride said she is ready to focus in the field this summer. "I couldn't be more excited to spend two weeks with some of my best friends and do geology," she said.

El Salvador

Carne Asada con Chirimole Tortillas (Serves 2)

16 oz top sirloin beef	2 tbsp salt	1 whole white onion (small)
1 tbsp mustard	1 tsp garlic (fresh, blended)	1 lime
1 tsp black pepper	3 whole tomatoes	1 cup corn flour (maseca)
2 oz soy sauce	1 bush cilantro	2 cups water

Preparation:

1. Cut beef six inches long and half an inch thick and marinate overnight with mustard, pepper, salt, soy sauce and garlic. Cover with foil.
2. Chop tomatoes and onion into small half-inch squares. Chop cilantro. Mix with salt and lime to taste.
3. For tortillas: Mix maseca with water, little by little, until dough is malleable. Place in bowl.

Cooking:

1. Heat grill and cook filets until well done. To reheat for the next day, heat oven to 350 degrees. Cook for 5-10 minutes until warm.
2. For tortillas: Using wet hands, form balls of 1/4 cup of dough and press to form a cake about 3 inches wide and half an inch thick. Place on grill until cooked with brownish spots, turning it over when brown.

Iraq

Chicken Tokka (Serves 5) *Voted Best Food in Expo*

7-8 chicken breasts	Black pepper (to taste)	1 cup tomato sauce
1-2 lemons	Salt (to taste)	7-8 skewers
2 cups yogurt

Preparation:

1. Cut chicken breast into small pieces.
2. Mix chicken with other ingredients and let it marinate for hours.
3. Put the chicken on the skewers.
4. Grill the chicken.

Indonesia

Ayam Balado (Serves 1-2)

2 chicken thighs (drum sticks)	2 tsp salt and sugar	2 onions (medium)
4 cups white rice (cooked)	2 white onions (medium, chopped)	3 eggs
3-4 cloves garlic (minced)	2 tbsp red chili pepper (large)	1/2 L cooking oil
1/2 tsp ginger	1/2 tsp candlenut	1/2 tsp turmeric
3 tbsp tamarind water	3 cups tomatoes (peeled, seeded and chopped)

Preparation:

For the marinade, mix tamarind water, turmeric, salt, coriander and pepper in a pan. Add some water (to fill half the pan), then add the chicken thighs. Cool until water is dried. For the chili sauce, in the frying pan, fry the chili and onions in the oil. Stir in the frying pan continuously for about 5-6 minutes. Add salts and sugar, then set aside. Deep fry the chicken until the skin is golden brown. Place the fried chicken in a large bowl and pour the chili sauce over it. Using two spoons, turn the chicken pieces over until they are evenly coated.

South Korea

Bul Go Gi (Serves 3-4)

700 g sliced beef	2 1/2 onions	2 1/2 oz garlic
1 1/2 oz julienne carrot	2 1/2 oz paprika (yellow and green)	2 1/2 oz mushroom
3 1/2 oz green onion	1 cup korean BBQ sauce	2 cups soy sauce
1/2 cup brown sugar	Black pepper (to taste)	Sesame seed oil

Preparation:

1. In a large resealable plastic bag, combine sliced beef with Korean sauce, garlic, onion, mushroom, sugar, water and soy sauce.
2. Refrigerate the mixture.
3. Put some oil in a pan and empty the bag into it. Fry until well cooked and serve.

Taiwan

Fried Dumplings (Makes 48 dumplings)

2 cups flour	1 cup boiling water	8 oz celery cabbage
3 tsp salt	1 lb lean ground pork	1/4 cup green onions (finely chopped)
1 tbsp white wine	1 tsp cornstarch	1 tsp sesame oil
1 dash white pepper	1/4 cup soy sauce	2-4 tbsp vegetable oil

Preparation:

1. Cut cabbage into thin strips. Mix with 2 tsp salt and set aside for five minutes. Squeeze out the excess moisture.
2. In a large bowl, mix the celery cabbage, pork, green onions, wine, cornstarch, 1 tsp of salt, 1 tsp sesame oil and white pepper.
3. In a bowl, mix the flour and 1 cup boiling water until a soft dough forms. Knead dough on lightly floured surface for about five minutes, or until smooth.
4. Divide the dough in half. Shape each half into a roll 12 inches long and cut each roll into half-inch slices.
5. Roll one slice of dough into a three-inch circle and place 1 tbsp of pork mixture in the center of the circle. Lift up the edges of circle and pinch five pleats up to create a pouch to encase the mixture. Pinch the top together. Repeat with remaining dough slices and filing.
6. Heat a wok or nonstick skillet until very hot. Add 1 tbsp vegetable oil, tilting the wok to coat both sides. If using a nonstick skillet, add 1/2 tsp vegetable oil. Place 12 dumplings in a single layer in the wok and fry for two minutes, or until bottoms are golden brown.
7. Add 1/2 cup water. Cover and cook for six to seven minutes, or until the water is absorbed. Repeat with the remaining dumplings.
8. For dipping sauce: In a small bowl, mix soy sauce with 1 tsp sesame oil. Serve with dumplings.

Venezuela

Parade your cause, not yourself

By JAKE TAPLEY
Opinion editor

We live in a time where activism can truly thrive. And now with the Internet and social media being utilized, it has become trendy to be supportive of a cause.

It is either the best or worst thing to happen to modern liberalism - I can't decide. I think it's wonderful when people are truly passionate for a cause. When someone identifies with the ideologies of a particular group, they tend to learn a lot about themselves.

However, more often than not, I see people driven by selfish ambitions. People often either bandwagon to a popular cause or support something because of what it will do for them (i.e. how it will make them look in the eyes of others). And while it's still great that these people are a part of something bigger than themselves, I think they need to check their motives at the door.

I myself don't really claim affiliation to any particular group or philanthropic endeavor - which I'm not bragging about - and I feel at ease about it.

I feel that what is ultimately important is that you are true to yourself and to others. Don't claim to be something that you're not or try too hard to be something that you are.

Just be yourself and express whatever comes with that.

When people long to make others believe they are who they say they are, they tend to stray away from good intentions and tread into the territory of self-obsession.

If you really stand for what you say you stand for, then there should really be no need to let everyone know what you stand for. If you're a feminist, that's great, but you should show me that you're a feminist, not tell me about it. And don't parade it around like it's a fashion statement.

Most of the people that you're trying to impress or make a statement to don't care. If they're like me, they probably think you're just embarrassing yourself.

And also consider that you are making your group look bad.

We are a culture that uses stereotypes and association as a form of judgment, and therefore, we are more likely to remember the people that make fools of themselves over the ones who have actually have integrity.

So it starts with you. But a cause is much bigger than you, to the point that you barely even matter at all. So don't let it go to your head.

STOP MAKING 'HARLEM SHAKE' VIDEOS

By JIMMY PYLES
Editor-in-Chief

Just like all of those "Gangnam Style" videos, these incredibly stupid "Harlem Shake" videos will be irrelevant in a few days. I can't be more thankful.

The fact people find these videos funny or entertaining makes me lose a little faith in humanity.

This brings up a question: if half the country does something incredibly annoying, will the other half join in? The answer to the question is yes.

The song by Baauer isn't even new, and I can't tell what is being said except for "do the 'Harlem Shake.'"

We get it. You can dance horribly with a mask on while people ignore you. Then the beat kicks in, and everyone starts dancing like extremely white people who don't even know how to do the Harlem Shake. (Not that I know how to, either - I just know it's not strange thrusting.)

Also, I don't know why every swim team makes a video underwater. University of Georgia did the first one, so just stop making them. They're just dudes in Speedos humping each other.

I recently got an invite to be part of USI's "Harlem Shake" video, which is dated for March 1. By March, people will have forgotten all about "Harlem Shake" and will have moved on to the next dumb thing.

I don't understand why the people organizing the USI "Harlem Shake" video are waiting so long to make the video. The dance is 30 seconds long. If it's a video with two takes, at best - that's a minute. Why do we need a week before we can make one?

I would be more excited for USI's "Harlem Shake" if wasn't going to be the same as every other college with Archie dancing and the whole student body going crazy. Also, UE beat us to the viral punch, so that's just another thing they can make fun of us for. Making this video in March will prove that it takes us longer to do something than any other college in the country.

The viral height of the "Harlem Shake" videos is right now. It won't be that way a week from now, so, USI, thank you for being behind the times yet again.

Please hurry up and release the video sooner. I know I want this fad to be over as soon as possible.

Eagles to start season at home

By ZANE CLODFLETER
Staff writer

Three seasons after the baseball team won its first NCAA title, USI varsity baseball coach Tracy Archuleta says his expectations haven't changed. For him and the team, it's all about progressing through the 35 regular season games and positioning themselves for the postseason.

That journey begins tomorrow against Lake Erie (2 p.m. first pitch), in what will be an unfamiliar spot for the opening series of the Eagles season - right here on campus.

"The change in the schedule this year comes with the Southern teams," Archuleta said. "Within Division II there have been more teams added and conferences are getting bigger."

In past seasons, the Eagles have opened their schedule in Savannah, GA on the campus of Armstrong Atlantic State University. With the Armstrong Pirates' Peach Belt conference growing in size, they will begin conference play, forcing USI to go back to a similar schedule used in Archuleta's first season in Evansville.

"We went back to the 2007 schedule when we opened up at home," Archuleta said. "The only difference is we aren't getting out that week before earlier."

USI enters the season picked to finish second in the GLVC East. Senior Reece Rounder says the Eagles have the ingredients to build off of a 26-24 campaign in 2012. "We have a very good core coming back from last year and they know what it takes to win at a high level," he said.

Rounder is one of nine Evansville natives on the Eagles roster, and for him it's nice to have teammates from similar surroundings.

"It's great to have a lot of local guys because it shows there is a lot of talent around Evansville, and hopefully we'll have fans come out early," Rounder said.

While playing at home to begin the season is a welcomed change for the Eagles, the weather conditions in Southern Indiana are not ideal for baseball in February and early March. Fellow senior Colton White said the key to opening the season in Indiana is adjusting to the elements.

"As the game goes on, your body starts to warm up, and it really doesn't impact you," White said. "A lot of people like to go down south, but I think we're going to take advantage of playing at home."

Archuleta says the season is a progression, and the key for the Eagles is not looking ahead too far.

"We have to concentrate on our first series right now and make adjustments as we go along with the season to be in position to get to the next spot," he said.

Senior catcher Colton White steps in front of home plate to tag out a University Of Missouri - St. Louis player during a game last year. Tomorrow the Eagles will play their first game at home against Lake Erie College (2 p.m. first pitch).

Athletic program not ruling out USI swim team

By DENNIS MARSHALL
Special to The Shield

USI's 25-meter swimming pool gets lots of use - but not by swim team members.

Until recently, swimming has not been a popular sport among Division II schools in this area, and few schools in the Great Lakes Valley Conference (GLVC) had intercollegiate swim teams.

No competition means no incentive to form a team, but now the GLVC has eight schools with swim teams.

According to Camelia Trahan, GLVC assistant commissioner, the inaugural GLVC Swimming and Diving Championship will take place Feb. 12-15, 2014 in St. John, Ind.

The list of universities expected to compete includes Bellarmine, Drury, Indianapolis, Lewis, Maryville, Truman State, Missouri-S&T and William Jewel, according to GLVC Commissioner Jim Naumovich.

"The addition of men's and women's swimming and diving to the GLVC gives us instant credibility as one of the nation's top swimming conferences, as our members have earned numerous national championships and top-10 rankings," Naumovich said in a press release.

"Most importantly though, our members are now able to bring their swimming programs under our umbrella and compete against one another for the right to be GLVC Champion," he added.

The establishment of a swim team at USI would require extensive planning, especially when it comes to funding.

"Now that some of the new schools in our league have swimming and few schools are adding swimming, it kind of changes the landscape a little bit," Jon Mark Hall, USI director of athletics, said.

"From the funding side of things, you look to see what kind of scholarships you would want to put into the program to be competitive and what kind of operating expenses you would have to have to be able to be competitive - travel dollars, equipment and that kind of stuff."

There would also be the challenges of recruiting swimmers to a new program and hiring a coaching staff.

"If we had the funding to hire a full-time (coach), it would probably be a really attractive job for some people who want to start up a program from scratch," Hall said. "This is 'no strings attached,' so to speak."

When it all comes down to it, though, money could mean the difference between having a team and not having one.

"Right now is probably not the best of times, with the landscape of the budget situation," Hall said. "But I think we need to at least look into it ... so when or if funding does become available ... we would be able to move one way or the other."

Dave Enzler, USI director of reaction and fitness and former University of Evansville swim coach, said, "I think there is the potential in this area for a very strong USI swim team, no question about it."

Despite USI's lack of a swim team, the pool still gets plenty of use. Monday through Friday, the pool is used for open swimming and classes for the kinesiology and sports department.

Some athletic teams use the pool to take some of the stress off the athletes' legs, and Memorial High School practices and hosts dual meets at the pool for about three months of the year.

Enzler said swim classes for children are also offered by the Division of Outreach and Engagement.

"I would not say the pool is packed, but it is certainly utilized," Enzler said. "If the university were to start up a team, there are more than a handful of swimmers that go to school here who could certainly be part of a varsity team."
