CARTERS GIVE UNIVERSITY ITS FIRST $1 MILLION GIFT

Mr. Jennings D. "Nick" and Mrs. Josephine K. "Jo" Carter of Evansville, Indiana, and Vero Beach, Florida, have given USI its first $1 million gift under a charitable remainder unitrust. Their record-setting contribution to the USI Foundation will endow the Jennings D. and Josephine K. Carter Scholarships for worthy USI students. Evansville area students who have completed work on a two-year associate degree will be targeted.

"Many ambitious and deserving young people are not financially able to continue their education," Mr. Carter explained. "It is our wish to assist them by providing the money to pay their college tuition. We hope to help those who have family or other obligations which require their full- or part-time employment and who therefore are unable to maintain a full academic schedule."

The retired Evans ville businessman and his wife, both Indiana natives who worked their way through college, share a strong desire to provide college financial assistance for worthy students. Reflecting on their college days, Mr. Carter said, "It would have been very helpful to Mrs. Carter and me if there had been a friend to help pay our college expenses. As it was, we both worked at a variety of jobs, day and night. It took me five years to graduate."

As long-time Evansville residents who owned and managed the Carter Mortgage Service Company from 1946 until 1960, when it was sold to Old National Bank in Evansville, the Carters want to assist students from Evansville and the immediate area, the majority of whom are being trained for the Evansville work force. "We want to help young people from this area. They have their whole life before them and they can make a better world," the Carters explained.

DR. HOOPS APPOINTED USI PRESIDENT

Dr. H. Ray Hoops, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs at the University of Mississippi (Ole Miss), has been named USI president. His appointment was approved last Thursday evening by the USI Board of Trustees. He will be the second USI president, succeeding Dr. David L. Rice whose 27-year tenure ends with his retirement at the end of June. Dr. Hoops, 54, will assume the position July 1. (See attached news stories.)

Mr. Bruce Baker, chair of the USI Board, said the trustees were impressed with the qualifications of all three finalists who visited the campus the past two weeks. "The overall quality of the pool of applicants, the diligent work of the 23-member search and screen committee, and the careful assessment of the finalists by campus and constituent groups in the community all were important components of the process which led the board to its decision," Mr. Baker said.

"From the beginning," he added, "when the search and screen committee helped to draft the qualities sought in the next president, we have been mindful in our assessment that we find the candidate with the greatest strengths for the campus at this point in its development. In Dr. Hoops, we have found the skills, leadership, and management experience we need to lead the University and continue its remarkable development.

"Dr. Hoops met each of our criteria in academic leadership, management, shared governance, resource development, student life, and community relations," Mr. Baker continued. "We feel fortunate to have attracted a field of such talented candidates, and to have found an excellent match between USI's needs and this candidate's abilities."

Dr. Hoops, in interviews during his USI visit this week, indicated a priority will be finding private and grant funding to supplement the University's state support, having noted that higher education has been on a "collision course with financial reality" for decades. He said colleges must find ways to increase efficiency, explore additional ways to deliver education, and look to expand all possible support for the schools over the next decade.

Dr. Hoops said also that USI does not need much in the way of change, that the University "is known across the country as an institution in a growth mode ... one of the institutions that enjoys the greatest community support in the nation." These are two assets a university can't buy, even with unlimited funds, Dr. Hoops said, adding "I want to continue the progress and hopefully accelerate it by building on past success."

The new president has been vice chancellor for Academic Affairs at Ole Miss since 1988. It is a state university with schools of medicine, law, engineering, and pharmacy and offers a broad range of doctoral programs. He previously served three years as associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs for the Oregon State System of Higher Education (OSSHE).

Dr. Hoops also was president of South Dakota State University and vice president for Academic Affairs at North Dakota State University. In the mid-70s he was dean of the Graduate College at the University of Northern Iowa and before that, was associate director of the Office of Grants and Contracts Administration and professor of communicative disorders at Wayne State University.

Dr. Hoops gained national recognition for his work as chair of Committee '95, a 35member committee of educators from elementary, secondary, and higher education institutions that looked at graduation standards, higher education admissions standards, enhanced minority access, enhanced cooperation between the three educational systems, development of alternative funding sources, and development of alternative education strategies. The committee developed Project '95, a blueprint for education in the State of Mississippi for the '90s which received praise within and beyond state boundaries and was awarded the State Council of Governments' Innovations Award in 1991.

Dr. Hoops' record for cultural and racial diversity at Ole Miss has been documented by a 50 percent increase in the number of minority faculty, appointment of the first female dean in the history of the institution, and a program which has increased the number of full-time minority graduate students from seven to 366 in a four-year period.

Dr. Hoops received a Ph.D. in audiology and speech sciences from Purdue University in 1966, an M.B.A. from Moorhead State University in 1985, an M.S. from Purdue University in 1964, and an undergraduate degree at Eastern Illinois University in 1962.

Dr. Hoops began his career as an educator at Wayne State and during his eight years there, received a Master Teacher Award from the students and was promoted to associate and full professor within a six-year period. He held three appointments in addition to the professorship -- director of the Office of Education Division of Marketing with the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; Senior Fulbright-Hays research scholar for the College of Medicine, University of the Philippines; and associate director of the Wayne State Office of Grants and Contracts Administration.

their way through school. The Carter Scholarship Endowment will be a tremendous boost for today's working students," he emphasized.

Dr. Rice said the Carters' plans to focus on students accepted at USI after having completed two-year college programs, such as those in the Indiana Vocational Technical colleges, "will be an excellent addition to initiatives by USI to encourage graduates of IVY Tech and other two-year colleges to obtain their baccalaureate degrees. These students can start on second base and head for home plate without going back to the batter's box."

The Carters credit Dr. Joseph E.O'Daniel, retired Evansville businessman, long-time USI supporter, and a member of the USI Board of Trustees, with directing their thinking about a major contribution to the USI Foundation. "We have been in a close circle of friends for many years," Mr. Carter explained. "Joe's enthusiasm about supporting talented college students who have financial need sparked our interest."

Mr. O'Daniel responded, "This successful businessman and his wife, who have warm feelings about the business success they experienced in the Evansville area, are making this gift to the USI Foundation to provide a proper education for students of the '90s. Unless you have a college education today, you are likely to live a minimum-wage lifestyle."

Mr. Ted C. Ziemer, Jr., USI Foundation chairman, in thanking the Carters said, "The marvelous generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Carter in providing this $1 million contribution will encourage major gifts

SEND A "THANK YOU" ... Mrs. Suzanne A. Nicholson, president of the USI Foundation and director of Development, urges USI faculty, staff, and students to stuff the Florida mailbox of Mr. and Mrs. Jennings D. Carter with thank you notes for their $1 million contribution to the University -- the first $1-million bestowal in USI history. The address is Mr. and Mrs. Jennings D. by others. There is no more important need at USI than providing scholarships for worthy and deserving students, and there is no more important work for the USI Foundation. We will strive to continue to merit the confidence which the Carters have placed in us as an institution of higher learning."

"We are thrilled with Nick and Jo Carter's exciting gift," remarked Mrs. Suzanne A. Nicholson, president of the USI Foundation and the University's director of Development. "On behalf of our students and alumni, faculty and staff, volunteers and contributors, I want to publicly thank the Carters for their generous contribution. It is a benchmark by which all future gifts will be measured."

Mrs. Nicholson noted it is important to point out the gift has been funded by a charitable remainder unitrust in which the Carters receive the income during their lifetimes. The Carter Scholarship Endowment then will be established, using the income to fund Carter scholarships. Mrs. Nicholson said most gifts of this size are deferred gifts.
