Improving Workforce Performance Series

The University of Evansville, Ivy Tech State College, and the University of Southern Indiana have formed a higher education partnership to provide training for business professionals in the area. All three courses will be offered from 5:30-7:30 p.m. at the Signature Learning Center, 610 Main Street, Sixth Floor Conference Room in downtown Evansville. Registration for each course alone is $39, $99 for all three sessions. For additional information call Dr. Nancy Kovanic at 812/464-1879.

"Communication Skills for Results"-Thursday, September 16. This one evening session develops an understanding of several critical business skills required in today's competitive market including setting goals, effective brainstorming, body language, conflict resolution, stress management and presentation skills.

"Diversity in the Workplace"-Thursday, September 23. Employees come in all different sizes, shapes, colors, attitudes and beliefs. This program explains individual differences in the workplace and provides tips on how to deal with difficulties with co-workers.

"Hello-I'm a Supervisor"-Thursday, September 30. Very often, today's front-line supervisors rise from the ranks of the organization in which they serve. They may be long-service employees who have a wealth of experience and are viewed as best suited to move into a supervisory position. However, making the transition into supervision isn't always as easy as it looks. This session will examine personal attributes and communication styles, the supervisor's role, creative problem solving and working to produce results.
