Stepping into a newly created administrative post holds many challenges, and building an office and its procedures from scratch is paramount among those challenges. Fortunately, when ANN PADBERG joined ISUE in April as ISUE's first Director of Development, she found that some of the "foundation" had been laid for her through fund-raising activities of the ISUE Foundation.

ANN brings to ISUE her experience in development work at the Villa Duchesne/Oak Hill School in St. Louis, an independent day school, where she served as Director of Development and Public Relations. In addition to being responsible for the school's annual fund drive, she handled public information for the school and was editor of the school's community newsletter. ANN received her B.A. from Notre Dame College in St. Louis and continued her studies at St. Louis University and the University of Missouri at St. Louis.

ANN'S top priority right now is the capital campaign for the new Health, Physical Education and Recreation Building. There are some portions of the building which can not be paid for from State funds. It will be ANN'S responsibility to develop and execute a fund drive, which among other things, will allow ISUE to install bleachers in the multi-purpose activity area and to cover the swimming pool. "As plans now stand," ANN says, "The campaign will be divided into two phases. The first phase is the advanced giving phase in which we will personally contact key individuals and businesses in the community. In the second phase letters asking for donations will be written to individuals associated with the university."

ANN attended the Big Ten Fund Raisers Institute at Mackinac Island in August and came back to ISUE with renewed enthusiasm and new ideas for development. "My goals include contacting individuals in the community to cultivate their interests in planned giving programs at ISUE, and in the future, I hope to centralize ISUE's fund-raising activities and to establish a much needed planned giving program. In three to five years, I feel ISUE's Development Office should be first rate, but there will always be areas that need refining and new areas to incorporate into the workings of the Development Office," she states.

ANN occasionally "dabbles in art" and is interested in horseback riding and stamp collecting. As a new member of the River City Civitan Club in Evansville, she will be working on public service projects with that group. A basketball enthusiast, ANN quickly points out that though she is not athletic, she is an "expert fan." "All four of my brothers were sports participants and I traveled around the countryside following my brother's high school and college career in basketball."

"I am looking forward to the opening of ISUE's basketball season when I can join the 'Blue Crew' in following the ISUE Screaming Eagles," ANN says.
