Autobiography and calligraphy are among new special-interest courses featured in the continuing education program for the winter and spring semester at the University of Southern Indiana. For information or registration for the following classes, call the USI Office of Continuing Education, (812) 464-1863:

An eight-week beginning ballroom dancing class will learn the foxtrot, East Coast swing, and waltz in Monday evening sessions at Corpus Christi Church, starting February 1.

Matthew Graham, USI assistant professor of English and a published poet, will be the instructor for "Letters to the Future: Putting Your Life on Paper," an autobiography class open to persons age 60 and over. It will meet on six Tuesdays, starting February 2, at Solarbron Pointe.

Bluegrass banjo aspirants will learn how to tune, chord, and pick in a six-week class starting Thursday, February 4, at USI, taught by Peter Ambrosone.

Professional Association of Diving Instructors certification is the goal in a four-week basic scuba diving course which starts February 7. It will be taught by Evansville Scuba Center.

A beginning photography course for those age 18 and older will be offered five Mondays, starting February 8, at USI. John Dawson will be the instructor.

The calligraphy class will meet six Mondays, starting February 15, at USI, with Kathy MacGregor instructing on Roman, Gothic, Chancery Cursive, western-style, and fun lettering.

Jaya Dodd will repeat her four-week "Oriental Gourmet" course on Tuesdays, starting February 23, at her restaurant in downtown Evansville.

The Swiss-German "Scherenschnitte -- Traditional Papercutting" technique will be featured in a one-night class on Wednesday, February 24, at Evansville Day School, taught by Nancy Michel.
